

The Politics of America's Fight against Global Warming

FEBRUARY 2, 2013

The world's climate is warming quickly. Reformers recently tried, but failed, to persuade Congress to enact "cap and trade" to reduce carbon emissions. What's next to move America toward a green economy?

Advocates and scholars looked back and forward at a symposium held at Harvard University on February 14, 2013, co-sponsored by the Scholars Strategy Network and the Columbia School of Journalism.

NEW REPORTS SPARK DISCUSSION

Background for the Harvard symposium comes from two newly released reports commissioned by the Rockefeller Family Fund in consultation with the Dean of the Columbia School of Journalism. Each report is available in PDF format by clicking on the title.

> Theda Skocpol, "Naming the Problem: What It Will Take to Counter Extremism and Engage Americans in the Fight Against Global Warming."

> Petra Bartosiewicz and Marissa Miley, "The Too Polite Revolution: Why the Recent Campaign to Pass Comprehensive Climate Legislation in the United States Failed."

> Contributing to the same discussion, SSN member Nate Loewentheil has a new brief on "The Past and Future of U.S. Environmental Reforms," based on his recently issued report "Of Stasis and Movement: Climate Legislation in the 111th Congress."

All three reports have been discussed and debated at the Grist website – in several posts by editor David Roberts, and in additional posts by Bill McKibben, Philip Bump, Joseph Romm, Eric Pooley, Mike Tidwell, and Nate Loewentheil.

Brad Plumer of the Washington Post's Wonkblog published an interview with Theda Skocpol; and Guardian reporter Suzanne Goldberg has done both an article and an interview about the Skocpol report.

After the presidential inauguration, Theda Skocpol published an article at Foreign Policy on what environmentalists should try to accomplish during Obama's second term.

Petra Bartosiewicz and Marissa Miley discuss their report at Huffington Post in a recent article on why "The Time for a Polite Green Revolution Has Passed."
