

Addressing Wage Theft on County Projects

Lina Mary Caroline Stepick, Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco

Thank you for taking the time to address wage theft in Multnomah County.

My name is Lina Stepick and I'm a Multnomah County resident and faculty member with the Labor Education and Research Center at the University of Oregon in downtown Portland. I am honored to be here today as a third party panelist and provide some introductory information on wage theft.

Wage theft impacts all workers, especially those most vulnerable to labor violations, it disadvantages good actors/contractors, undermines public revenues¹ (which is particularly concerning for publicly funded projects), and has a negative multiplier effect as workers are less able to spend their earnings in the local economy.

To start, I want to be sure we are all on the same page regarding the rather expansive definition of wage theft. I then have some statistics to share from studies conducted across the country.
