Public Charge Rule: Experts Available on Immigration and Public Assistance

AUGUST 12, 2019

The Trump Administration this week released a sweeping new "public charge" rule that would deny green cards and permanent residency to documented immigrants who receive public assistance or fail to meet income standards.

For journalists looking for expert sources, these researchers are available to comment:

LUISA S. DEPREZ

University of Southern Maine, Portland

Email: deprez@maine.edu

Expert on welfare policy, focusing on both its restrictive nature and its effect on recipients.

CAROLYN J. HEINRICH

Vanderbilt University

Email: carolyn.j.heinrich@vanderbilt.edu

Expert on social welfare policy and poverty reduction efforts.

TIFFANY D. JOSEPH

Northeastern University

Email: t.joseph@northeastern.edu

Expert on immigration, U.S. racial dynamics, and healthcare access.

HELEN B. MARROW

Tufts University

Email: helen.marrow@tufts.edu

Expert on immigration, race and ethnicity, inequality, and social policy.

CAITLIN PATLER
University of California, Davis

Email: patler@ucdavis.edu

Expert on citizenship and legal status, deportation, and intersections with criminal law.