Trump is Sabotaging America's Greatest Demographic Advantage

Matthew Blanton, The University of Texas at Austin

"A profoundly dangerous and destabilizing thing." That's how Vice President J.D. Vance recently described America's falling birthrate. Recently, the "inherently pronatalist" White House is considering a new set of proposals to address it—including government-funded menstrual cycle education and even a national medal for women who bear six or more children. But while Republicans may recognize the problem, their broader agenda actively undermines the most immediate and effective solution to population decline: immigration.

The Trump administration is enacting an all-out assault on immigration. Breaking from decades of Republican rhetoric that championed legal immigration, the current approach targets not just undocumented migration but legal pathways as well.
